Given that it can take many years for nitrate to move through the water table it would be unfair to punish a new property owner for the actions of a past owner. How is HBRC going to deal with that issue?</li> <li>Also, I can imagine a situation where there is a breach of in-stream nitrate levels, but the nutrient budgets of all properties feeding in to that stream are deemed to be acceptable for their land use. What course of action will HBRC take then?</li> <li>Is HBRC aware that the Overseer model has not been tested or validated for Hawke's Bay conditions, and that there is no record (that I am aware of, and I have asked the Overseer team) of how accurate it is at predicting whole of farm nitrate leaching?</li> </ol>	Individual

13/08/2015	OIR-15-053	Transferred		Re: electricity revenue: 1. Is there an existing power line of sufficient capacity to get the electricity from the dam head to the national grid? 2. If not: A. has the cost of putting in a line been included in the $275m build cost? B. Is there an existing designation you can use or do you have a pre-existing resource consent to build the line? 3. If there is neither a designation nor an existing consent, does there need to be a consultation process with landowners; and if so, when is that planned to occur? Re: Financing I note that 75% of the funding costs are projected to be covered via bank debt, but that is shown to be on an interest only basis. 1. Is there an expectation that CIIL is part of the bank debt funding tranche? If yes, how will CIIL's principle be repaid given they do not provide either long term debt or permanent equity? 2. Is it a reasonable assumption that the equity investors do not receive a guaranteed return and any dividend stream is 'at risk' as it is directly related to the dam company having sufficient revenues to pay dividends?
